

File-number
en-2020-3-summary

Information

Takashi Naruse, Ayaka Kitano, Hiroshige Matsumoto, Satoko Nagata, A logic model for evaluation and planning in an Adult Day Care for disabled Japanese old people. Int. J. Environ. Res. Public Health 2020, 17(6), 2061.

Accepted in March 2020, Published in March 2020, DOI: 10.3390/ijerph17062061

How to view the full text

You can view the full text following the URL and download the PDF for free.

<https://doi.org/10.3390/ijerph17062061>

Attention

Unauthorized reproduction and citation are prohibited.

Caption

Writing in progress. Please wait for a little.

Subtitle

Writing in progress. Please wait for a little.

Main text

- This study developed a Figure, Logic model, for explaining the process where adult day care service provides services and better outcomes in their clients. We interviewed staff members. It explained the service process: nine kinds of "inputs" consisting of place and human intervention promote ten kinds of clients'/families' experiences, then being accumulated the experiences will relate to three kinds of outcomes among clients.
- (Following, updates are in progress.)